THACKER'S INDIAN COOKERY BOOKS.

"Kissing don't last, cookery do"—Meredith.

The Indian Cookery Book. Vol I—English, Vol II—Hindustani (Persian Character)
Rs 3 each

The oldest, but still the best, Indian Cookery Book

Things for the Cook (Nimat Khana.) By "SHALOT." A new Cookery Book. Two vols.
In English Rs 2, In Hindustani, Persian Character, for the Cook, Rs 2.

This book should prove a veritable blessing to the Mem Sahibs who have just arrived in 'The Land of Regrets' and even more so to those wearied with trying to think of something new and dainty in the way of comestibles.

Anglo-Indian Cuisine. (Khana Kitab and Domestic Economy) By CONSTANCE E. GORDON. Rs. 1-8.

*. This is possibly the most comprehensive Indian Cookery Book ever produced at so moderate a price. It comprises a handy guide to every day menus, with meals for vegetarians and dyspeptics, Bazaar Lists with menus for various number of people and a large variety of Recipes, including Camp cooking, chafing dish cookery as well as cookery for invalids. Sauces, pickles, etc., are not forgotten. There are weights and measures for Calcutta, Bombay and Poona, glossary of Indian terms, wages, table and every variety of information regarding domestic economy so hard to obtain in India except by actual experience often hardly bought. For instance, a summary of Bazaar prices in the Calcutta, Bombay and Poona Markets is given. The price is so small and the information so varied and valuable that every lady will be anxious to obtain a copy.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF THE PRINCIPAL INDIAN INHABITANTS.

For Barristers, Vakils, Pleaders, see under their respective stations.

As the greatest confusion at present prevails in the English rendering of Indian names, it is advisable to look under each variety of spelling that occurs to the searcher.

Ruling Chiefs, Noblemen, Zemindars, etc., are shown under their territorial designations.

Where no station is mentioned, CALCUTTA is to be understood.
